

CO-TEACHING & DIFFERENTIATION (ADVANCED LEVEL WORKSHOP)

Grades K-12

March 30, 2011 • Crowne Plaza, Edison, NJ

This workshop is designed for teachers and administrators who already have a solid background on the six co-teaching models, different structures for utilizing them, how to most effectively access two teachers within a co-taught classroom, and basic differentiation techniques.

In this advanced level workshop, teachers will learn how to:

- Implement multiple co-teaching models within one lesson (utilizing at least two co-teaching models)
- Group students within a co-taught classroom: teachers will be taught practical strategies to group students creatively that do not take away from common planning time.
- Create a Partnership Agreement: teachers will learn how to effectively address and document how they will utilize common planning time, and how they will address student behaviors, grading policies, modifications and accommodations for all students
- Utilize low-prep strategies for differentiating content, process, product, and environment: teachers will be given the opportunity to learn simple, practical strategies for differentiating all aspects of learning within the classroom

Sabrina Romano has worked as a consultant teacher, resource room teacher, and collaborative team teacher and has extensive experience with differentiating instruction for all levels of exceptional learners. Sabrina has expertise in implementing accommodations and modifications within a general education classroom setting. Her CTT class is a demonstration site for teachers around New York City. In addition to providing very practical workshops on Inclusion, Collaborative Teaching, and Differentiating Instruction, Sabrina often demonstrates lessons in the classroom, modeling effective practices for the both general and special educators. Sabrina has led CTT workshops that include: creating and maintaining strong Co-Teaching Teams, designing effective student groups in co-taught classes, simple strategies for co-teachers, and innovative approaches for looking at student work.
