Here is some feedback from Leah's workshops:

"This was the most worthwhile presentation that I've ever been to."

"It was so practical that I felt as though Leah was in my classroom. Her teaching experience really shines through."

"Leah was informative, well-organized, practical, and she is an excellent presenter."

"I got so many ideas. I can't wait to try them out in my classroom."

"I loved the hands-on activities and the examples of students work that were presented."

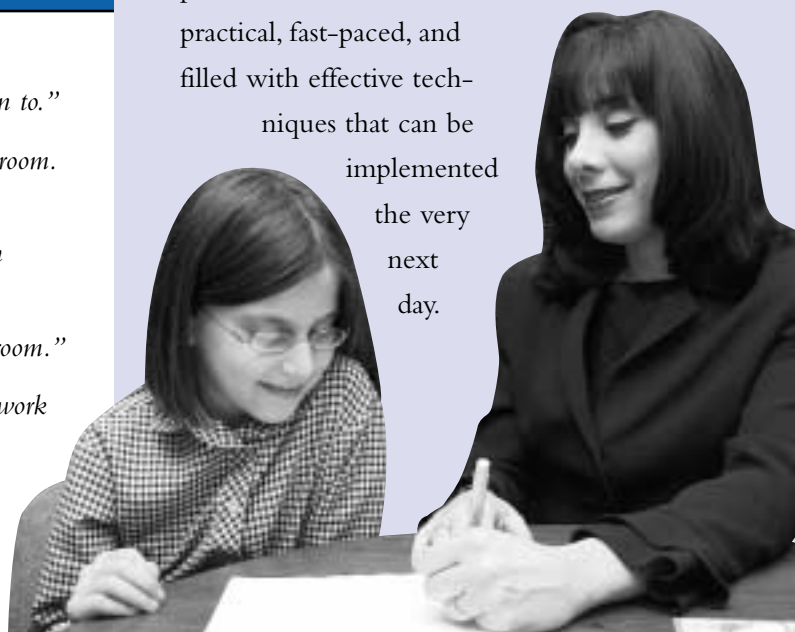

"I appreciated finding out about so many teacher resources and student materials."

About the presenter:

Leah Danziger, M.Ed., is a private educational consultant who has conducted hundreds of in-service workshops throughout the Northeast. She has presented at the NJEA convention, and for the NJPSA, NJASCD, NJRA, and at numerous Universities. In addition, she has a private practice as an LDTC, and has worked with hundreds of students in all grade levels.

Prior to beginning her private practice Leah was a resource room teacher for nine years. She successfully worked with hard-to-reach students and students with learning disabilities. As a literacy consultant, Leah has worked with gifted and talented students in all grade levels and has set up enrichment programs in schools.

Every strategy has been tested by Leah and proved to be successful; therefore they are guaranteed to work. Leah is an exceptional teacher and an engaging presenter. Her seminars are practical, fast-paced, and filled with effective techniques that can be implemented the very next day.
